Profile

After leaving University in the late '90s I was lucky enough to secure a job at Shift-4, one of the most respected film & television facilities houses in London. After learning the ropes, which included camera assisting, gripping, lighting and, most importantly sound. I then spent 7 years as an in-house sound recordist working on many differing projects and forging relationships which would stand me in good stead for the future. I have now been freelance for the last 14 years running my own successful company, Boominshot Ltd which provides location sound solutions for film and television. I am a member of both BECTU and The Institute of Professional Sound and have been shortlisted for a TV Craft sound Bafta on two separate occasions.
